WORK IN DENMARK

Denmark needs dedicated healthcare professionals

Are you considering a career abroad? Then Denmark is the place for you! In Denmark, you get to work in a tax-funded, universal healthcare system that grants equal access to healthcare services to all citizens. The focus on patient-centred care is growing in Denmark, which means that you, as a healthcare professional, involve your patients in decision-making and tailor care to their individual needs.

Will I need to speak Danish? No!

You do not have to speak any Danish before signing a contract – English will do. Some healthcare roles may require a certain Danish proficiency level. In most cases, Danish classes are provided free of charge by your new employer as part of your contract. Most Danes speak English fluently, but learning Danish is necessary for all healthcare personnel, as clear communication is crucial in healthcare.

Meet expats working in healthcare in Denmark

Athina, 29 years old from Greece

"The work conditions are better, the salary is better. Even though everything is more expensive, the salary is good enough for you to have a really nice life. You have enough to go on a holiday, have a hobby and still pay for everything. You work with new technology, your colleagues treat you well and you will be part of a team. Life in Denmark is good!"

Luciana, 39 years old from Portugal

"I have more time for the family, and I see my kids going to school. Working in Denmark makes me and my family more relaxed. There is a balance between work and free time. Work in general is more calm here and less stressful than in Portugal."

What is working in the Danish healthcare system like?

Unique working conditions

- A strong focus on a healthy work-life balance, so you have the energy to dedicate yourself to both your family and every patient.
- A flat hierarchy with open communication, allowing you to collaborate with different specialists and influence decision-making processes.

Teamwork and professional growth

- A focus on ongoing education and professional development keeps you updated on the latest medical advancements and best practices.
- A collaborative and team oriented approach creates a culture, where you are supported and responsibilities are shared.

Highly efficient and digitalized

- A supportive work environment with enough resources, modern facilities and advanced technologies, allowing you to deliver high-quality care.
- Efficient workflows and access to digital and up-to-date patient information, reducing your level of paperwork, manual data entry and administrative tasks.

Working conditions & Social benefits

- Collective agreements guaranteeing you benefits, such as a 37-hour workweek, 5-6 weeks paid vacation, parental leave, a pension scheme, and much more.
- You also get free universal health-care and language courses, guaranteed childcare, tuition-free education, and much more.

How do I obtain Danish authorisation to use my title?

In order to practice within your field of healthcare, you need to obtain Danish authorisation. You have to apply for authorisation with The Danish Patient Safety Authority, and the process varies depending on your specific profession and nationality. In any case, the process involves submitting documentation and, in some cases, undergoing exams or additional training.

Visit the website of The Danish Patient Safety Authority for more information: <https://en.stps.dk/>
